

Humane Society president addresses changes at shelter

Dear Editor:

With all of the recent activity at our animal shelter regarding the death of a dog named Bozo and the Animal Control Dept. being put under our Chief of Police, Dwight Duch, the Forrest City Area Humane Society would like to address the current situation to citizens of Forrest City.

As for the investigation into the incident at the animal shelter which left a dog dead and several injured, we speculate that this could be considered an isolated incident and all charges dropped. We will have no choice but to accept that. But we also know that this may be upsetting to some people. What we have been and are concerned about, is the series of events and behaviors for the last year and a half that led to this tragic event. We want to ensure that all of the changes in progress are positive and permanent.

The Forrest City Area Humane Society is working with Chief Duch as he strives to make those much needed changes in the management of the animal shelter. Chief Duch has accomplished more in the one week he has been in charge of the shelter than has been done in the last year in a half. For that, we are grateful as well as relieved.

Sincerely,
Janie Hicks
FCAHS, President
