

Rescue Ink to hold educational animal seminar Tuesday at Sports Complex

The Forrest City Area Humane Society has announced an educational animal seminar to be held Tuesday, June 22, at 7 p.m., at the Forrest City Sports Complex lower meeting room.

The seminar will be taught by Rescue Ink, a nationally known animal rescue group formed of bikers with a soft spot for animals.

They are highly experienced in all areas concerning animals. Rescue Ink has its own television show, "Rescue Ink Unleashed," which appears on the National Geographic Channel.

According to a press release, the FCAHS encourages anyone interested to attend this free educational event. "It is guaranteed to be fun, entertaining and educational," the release stated. This event is possible under the sponsorship of Pepsi Cola.

The group's Web site describes Rescue Ink as "an army of tattooed, motorcycle-riding street guys who have zero tolerance for animal abuse and neglect."

Janie Hicks, president of the FCAHS, recently said the visit will be educational.

"They are all animal advocates," she said. "They talk about rescuing animals and inform the public about animal care."

Hicks added that the emphasis would be on the positive.

"They will just be here to help,"

she said. "They are not here to stir up any trouble. They're just wanting to come and help. They said they are really looking forward to working with us and helping to get our shelter back on the right track."
